are in the milk itself. Simply add water and sugar, as your doctor directs, for a complete infant diet.

Formulac is simple to prepare. It avoids the danger of omitting the necessary vitamins, or giving an inadequate amount. It's thriftily priced, and sold in grocery and drug stores everywhere.

Ask your doctor about this new vitamin-and-mineral-fortified milk. He'll tell you Formulac has been clinically tested — that it has the approval of the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association. He'll tell you, also, that Formulac is a great forward step in infant nutrition.

YOUR DOCTOR AND YOUR BABY

In baby's life, the doctor is second in importance only to the mother. More babies are alive and well today because doctors have found better ways of caring for children, protecting them against disease, and feeding them. Your doctor is always ready to give you the benefit of his training and experience in caring for your child. Follow his directions at all times.

SHOESHINE BOY

City-born, city-bred, he whiles away his early years the best he can, against the day when he becomes a man.

by JOAN YOUNGER

ON the cold rock island of Manhattan, where the southern tip of New York City bulges into the East River, hundreds of thousands of families have crowded upward into stone houses scarred with iron fire escapes and battered by wind and rain and sleet and snow. To walk through one of these streets is to walk in a valley of dirty stone and mortar, upon and merchandise; to peer into it is to peer into a poor man's chasm of noise and empty echo; to play in it is at once joy and torture, danger and delight.

In one of these streets, just off First Avenue, lives Frederick Peter Wagner. He was thirteen last summer; he is a member of the Boys' Club and the Boy Scouts, and every Sunday morning without fail he goes to Mass at 9 A.M. His hair is the color and texture of tired straw; he brushes it back out of his eyes with his hand. One of his front teeth is broken from a game of street pickball. His eyes are a bright blue and his grin is wide and engaging. He is a master at just waiting and watching; he can stand on the stoop for hours, looking loose, but not restless. His body is expressive; he may shrug instead of talking, lower his shoulders to show disdain, tense with interest. He would like more than anything else to be a flier, but his closest connection with flying is the kite flying he does from the roof. He has decided it is the better part of wisdom to concentrate on becoming a carpenter, and he has already made one small chair for his younger sister, Dottie, borrowing the superintendent's tools. Next year he will attend classes in carpentry at school. This year he is in the seventh grade and "too young."

He describes school as "all right," thinks history is the "best" subject, and got a half year behind his age group following a transfer from parochial school to public school recently. Last summer he spent two weeks at camp. He likes to read comic books and some of the fiction provided at school,
